

Solutions for Government

Elected officials and the public expect government organizations to be transparent, efficient, and highly responsive. Government leaders must meet and often exceed these expectations while operating in an environment defined by shrinking budgets, constantly evolving organizations, and intense media and public scrutiny. Frequently, they must also manage complex staffing arrangements, made up of a mix of political appointees, long-term employees, and contractors. To be successful, they need to lead with clarity of purpose, unambiguous policies and procedures, and seamless interfaces with other government organizations.

At Strategy Arts, we understand the challenges government leaders face. We have served customers ranging from federal organizations to city and county governments. Our consultants have experience working with organizations in military and civilian medicine, security, technology, the environment, and social welfare. We work with our clients to frame projects that fit their unique needs, and collaborate with them from start to finish, building client capacity while helping them achieve their long-term project goals.

Our Consulting Approach

For more than 11 years, we've been building a different kind of consulting business, one that engages organizations throughout projects, builds ownership and support for critical decisions, and creates internal capabilities that stay with our clients long after projects are finished. Combining the talents and creativity of people with the illuminating results of research and analysis, our planning processes yield extraordinary results.

Clients tell us several things set Strategy Arts apart:

- ✓ Our senior consultants are experienced planners and trained facilitators. They all know how to get the most out of people and projects.
- ✓ We do not begin a project until the project design fully aligns with our clients expectations.
- ✓ Our end-to-end project process maps help clients envision all the steps needed to pursue their goals, even if they only need our help for some of them.
- ✓ We don't consider ourselves finished until our clients are actively pursuing their goals.

We look forward to learning more about your organization and the challenges you face.
